contentment and prosperity that come from equal laws wisely and honestly administered, can that home-strength be secured which is indispensible to successful resistance to assaults from without. And he is right in saying, that there could be no greater national madness than that, which, while sourting collissions from abroad, would fill portions of our own land with discontent and poverty by legislation upon untried and alarming theories. The fact is, to put ourselves in any reasonable condition of readiness for war, we must not only improve vastly the financial affairs of the whole country but especially direct our ulmost energies to building up the presperity of the South upon the ruins with which she is now darkly covered, soothing and healing her wounds, extending to her the full enjoyment of all the rights and privileges which she has been deprived or by vindictive and remorssices legislation and by arbitrary and despotic millitary power, and making her feel that the days of her humiliation and degradation are past, never to feature. If a mighty war were to come upon us in the present unfortunate condition of our country, a small portion of the people of the South, reflecting bitterly upon their wrongs, and subordinating paticiosism to vengeance, would probably stand alsoof from the condition and the majority, although nobly attempting to do their duty, might hek a portion of the all-absorbing spirit of enthusiasm and devotion which they should feel in fighting the battles of their country. Even with wrongs unredressed, the arraics of the South would probably be equal to any in the world, but, let full justice be done them, and they would be invincible.

Condition of Things in Virginia. The conservatives of Virginia, as The conservatives of Virginia, as we have repeatedly stated, have been for some time in high spirits, intending to elect Mr. Walker to the office of Governor, and to relieve themselves from their present anomalous condition by the acceptance of the State constitution eliminated of the the State constitution eliminated of the provisions which they have expected the President to submit separately to their votes. This provisions which they have supposed would be thus submitted were, if our readers are awars, three in number, the test-oath, the disfranchisement of white men, and the "bounty organization," so called. They had a right to expect, nay the second of the second of that black and accursed provision as a part of it.

Under these extraordinary and wholly unexpected effectinatances; what will the Virginia conservatives do? They have been, as we said, united in a determination to accept the constitution with the three vile provisions stricken out by their separate votes, but Grant resolves that the vilest one of the three, the one which he himself has especially denounced, shall stand or fall with the body of the constitution, and what the conservatives or the majority of them will do in this new state of case we know not. Undoubtedly for the present they are broken up and in confusion. Some of them will probably go for the constitution, and all, and others will vote against it, and all, and others will vote against it, and still others, we presume, will keep aloof in and all, and others will vote against it, and still others, we presume, will keep alcot in diagust from the polls. The Lynchburg Virginian, an influential Democratic organ, says, "the action of the President forces upon us the dread alternative of rejecting the whole constitution. Let the obnoxious provision be put upon the same toother with the test-oath and distranchies. ng clauses, and we shall all labor with gated constitution will certainly be adopted. Otherwise it will and ought to be re jected." The Lynchburg News, also an influential Democratic organ, speaks in the exhibitions, the later will do so. The English Sermon Trade.

This is indeed a calamity. But nothing better is to be expected than that President Grant, acting under the influence of evil counsellors, will fill up the measure of the propile's calamities.

The trade in sermons (manuscript sermons sold to clergymen for use in the pulpit,) is an English institution, as nowhere else do we see them so freely advertised. This trade, we are told by the English journals, has grown enormously within a few years. The newspapers, which circulate more especially among the clergy of the English establishment, have regularly contained advertisements offering orignal, striking and orthodox manscript se mons for sale, and the fact of their extensive advertisement shows that they are PUBLIC SALES. This is felt to be pushing the system too far, and the project seems likely to bring about a strong reaction. The Guardian, which has been in the habit of publishing advertisements of this kind, declares that it will do so no more. The Guardian says: "If the laity once come to the conclusion that preaches are commonly indebted to others for their sermons, few diergymen will be above suspicion. Only the very able or very industrious will be able to defy the suggestion that they, too, have gone into the market for a discourse, and a taint of insincerity will attach to hundreds of excellent clergymen who have done nothing to deserve it. For our own part, we have determined not to lend our advertising columns to a system which we are unable to defend. We will at least practice, at a loss to ourselves, what we preach." The Prevailing Suicide Mana.

Less sympathy is expended on the more common form of suicide, in which a certain man drowns himself because a woman will not marry him, or in which a woman drowns herself because her husband or lover has become faithless. This biunder is committed soiley through the man or woman's not being able to measure the proportions of the accidents of life. There never was a man or woman worth cutting one's throat for, much as young poots have gritten of the delight of dring at the feet of some perhaps not very intellectual or beautiful young person. The man who stilles himself with chereosi fumes because a certain girl refuses to be his wife is merely unable, at a time of temporary frong, to measure, the length of life and see what, after all, are the necessary things to existence—the things necessary to make it betrable and pleasant. You may teal this incapacity, folly or loss mit, say on please, it is

The Prignoli Opera.

The performance of the Brignoli troupe lasmight was a very decided improvement upon those of the two preceding nights. A part of this improvement may be attributed to the nature of the programme, which was admirably chosen and arranged, embracing the first act of Lucia, the fourth act of La Favorits, the come trio from

Some time in 1988, perhaps in January, Jørry Soilivan, husband of Catharine Sullivan, who claimed that she was a creditor of Hapk Barrell, he having been a boander of his for some time, brought to the office of MoCarthy the discharge papers of said Farrell, and requested him to prosecute the claim for additional bounty due him under the act of Congress. Her object seemed to be to secure the board bill due her by Farrell. The necessary papers were made out. Farrell not being present heavy were handed to Mr. Soilivan, with instructions to him to have them filled up where blanks had been left for dates, and signed by Farrell and properly witnessed. In a short time Mr. Soilivan returned the papers that had been prepared, signed as it purported by Farrell and witnessed by Mrs. Sullivan. The proper affidavit was then made by the witness, and if a mistake has occurred in the date of the notary's cordicate it was made without any intention of wrong. The notary's signature to the certificate is genuine and can be proven by a number who know the papers were and court of the notary's signature to the certificate is genuine.
